The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims call for a Riehle compression of 60-90. This conflicts with the 50-90 PGA compression of the specification (paragraph 19).

Also note paragraph 21's PGA -Riehle correlation is incorrect. PGA is not 180 times the Riehle value.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the Bartels 2001/0046907 publication in view of Sano '906.

Bartels (table I) discloses golf ball cores corresponding to applicant's cores. In one embodiment, the core is covered with an intermediate layer (paragraph 39) and a thermoset urethane outer cover (paragraph 37). In another embodiment the core is covered with only a blend of ionomers (paragraph 37).

The core has a PGA compression of 70-110 (paragraph 42) which is 110-70 on the Riehle scale.

Bartels does not describe the particle size of his zinc acrylate used in the core. It is known that keeping the particle size between 1-4.5 microns improves COR relative to larger sizes (see table 2-4 of Sano). It would have been obvious to keep Bartels' zinc acrylate within the optimum size for the expected benefits.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the Felker '892 or Moriyama '155 Patent in view of Sano.

Felker (table I) and Moriyama (table) exemplify golf cores of applicant's composition. These references do not discuss particle size of the zinc acrylate.

Sano (see tables 2-4) shows size of 1-4.5 microns improves COR relative to larger sizes. It would have been obvious to keep Felker/Moriyama's zinc acrylate within the optimum size for the expected benefit.
